“Quite unlike anything else I have read from Africa.”

—Doris Lessing

“By meshing the richness of African beliefs . . . into the Western framework of the novel, he creates a mysterious and surreal epic.”

—Henning Mankell

Mwanito Vitalício was eleven when he saw a woman for the first time, and the sight so surprised him he burst into tears.

Mwanito’s been living in a big-game park for eight years. The only people he knows are his father, his brother, an uncle, and a servant. He’s been told that rest of the world is dead, that all roads are sad, that they wait for an apology from God. In the place his father calls Jezoosalem, Mwanito has been told that crying and praying are the same thing. Both, it seems, are forbidden.

The 8th novel by New York Times-acclaimed Mia Couto, The Tuner of Silences is the story of Mwanito’s struggle to reconstruct a family history that his father is unable to discuss. With the young woman’s arrival in Jezoosalem, however, the silence of the past quickly breaks down, and both his father’s story and the world are heard once more.

The Tuner of Silences was heralded as one of the most important books to be published in France in 2011, and remains a shocking portrait of the intergenerational legacies of war. Available for the first time in English.

Mia Couto is the author of 25 books. Translated into 20 languages, his novels have been bestsellers in Africa, Europe, and Latin America.

“Seriously clever.”

—Russell Smith

Psychologists are people we love to hate. At best, they’re compassionate detectives of the human soul, healers and diagnosticians, assessing the internal machinations that structure our lives and behavior. At worst, however, they’re smug, hyper-educated, bombastic, yappy, socially deaf, thrice-divorced and twice-separated spouse-swapping cat-torturing perverts.

Plus, they’re all in this book. And so are their patients.

C.P. Boyko’s Psychology and Other Stories is a brilliant study of mental illness, mental health, and the people who try to tell them apart.

The author of Blackouts, C.P. Boyko has been twice diagnosed with schizophrenia—wrongly, he believes.

“Ray Robertson’s story of an angry black man living in 19th-century Ontario is a mix of historical accuracy and vivid storytelling.”

—Globe & Mail

“A fascinating historical novel ... a powerful and timeless insight into the human condition.”

—Northern Terminus: The African Canadian History Journal

Born a slave in 1847, but raised as a free man by the Reverend William King, David has rebelled against his emancipator and a future in the church. Now he’s a God-cursing, liquor-slinging, money-having, Hobbes-quoting man-about-town, famously educated, fabulously eccentric, and more-or-less happy...till the death of Reverend King brings his past back to haunt him.

Inspired by the Elgin Settlement, which by 1852 housed 75 free black families and was studied by Lincoln, Robertson’s novel is a fiery look at a community essential to the Underground Railroad’s success.

Ray Robertson is the author of the novels Home Movies, Heroes, Moody Food, Gently Down the Stream, and What Happened Later, as well as two collections of nonfiction (including Why Not? Fifteen Reasons to Live, shortlisted for the Hilary Weston Prize). David is his sixth novel.

“As a potential heir to the tradition of Margaret Atwood and Alice Munro, McNinnis is off to a promising start.”

—Publishers Weekly

“McNinnis’s prose is galvanized by deft dialogue and imagery that keens with a poet’s sensibility, and her recurring themes are hauntingly conveyed without lapsing into excessive grimness.”

—Quill & Quire

Nadine McNinnis’s sophomore collection is about endings and their revelations: the affair that ends a marriage, the disease that ends a life, the effect of a long-ago suicide. As her characters struggle to administer to each other in their final moments, each story becomes an autopsy, dissecting bodies for their secrets and bloodlines for the things they hide.

Nadine McNinnis is the author of seven books, and her work appears in a variety of journals, including The Malahat Review, The New Quarterly, Event, and Room of One’s Own. Her poetry has been shortlisted for the Pat Lowther Memorial Award and her fiction has won Ottawa Book and CBC Literary Awards. She presently lives in Ottawa.

“Mark Kingwell is a beautiful writer, a lucid thinker, and a patient teacher ... His insights are intellectual anchors in a fast-changing world.”

—Naomi Klein

Mark Kingwell's first book, A Civil Tongue, predicted with remarkable accuracy the Tea-Party-style decline in political debate. Since then Kingwell has been urging readers to consider how bad public behaviour can make it harder to imagine the society we want. Now, with these 17 new essays, where cultural theorists share pages with poets, zombies, and presidents, Kingwell argues for a sympathetic democracy to counter the strangeness of the modern world.

Mark Kingwell is the author of sixteen books and a contributing editor for Harper's Magazine.

“Sibus’s poems are not everyone’s cup of tea ... instead of breathing air they inhale the exhaust of apocalyptic times.”

—Books in Canada

Sub Divo is a screed against the cultural impotence of modernity, and the decline of American empire. Personal, epistolary, corrosive, vented with Sibus’s classical spleen and explosive prosody, this collection teems with emperors, historians, presidents, politicians, musicians, composers, trollops, poets, gods. Few poets could pair such a flirtatious and colloquial style with such allusive breadth.

Norm Sibus has been writing and publishing poetry for over thirty years. Born in Oberammergau in 1947, he grew up in Germany, Alaska, Utah, and Washington before moving to Vancouver in 1968. He has published several volumes of poetry in Canada and England. Sibus currently lives and works in Montreal, Quebec.

Self-Portrait Without a Bicycle

Jessica Hiemstra

“The poet listens, tastes and remembers, senses afloat, dipping into the past and then surfacing again, drawn by a perfect but fleeting moment.”

—Descant

Painters use the term “fugitive pigments” to describe inks or paints designed to lighten after brief exposure to light. In Self-Portrait Without a Bicycle, poet and artist Jessica Hiemstra uses the idea of fugitive color to explore the grieving process: whether her subject is a lost grandparent, child, or cat, Hiemstra renders the fleetingness of life with fine, delicate strokes.

Lindsay. Abel. Howe. Sawchuk. Decades later, the names still resonate with Detroit Red Wings fans. The Wings were the dominant American-based team of the NHL's so-called Original Six era, when teams played each other 14 times a season, and rivalries were bitter. Often referred to as the New York Yankees of hockey, Wings GM Jack Adams would have none of it. “The Yankees,” he said, “are the Red Wings of baseball.”

Currently the sports columnist for The Windsor Star, Bob Duff has covered the NHL since 1988 and is a contributor to The Hockey News. Duff's other book credits include: The China Wall, The Timeless Legend of Johnny Bower, and The Hockey Hall of Fame Book of Goalies.
