Reading a ghost story on Christmas Eve was once as much a part of traditional Christmas celebrations as turkey, eggnog, and Santa Claus. After last holiday season's wildly successful debut, we're thrilled to announce that Seth is back with three new spooky, Yuletide stories.

To make joining the tradition easy, we've developed an attractively priced prepack. It comes with the narrow, full-colour, easy-to-assemble loader to the left, as well as twenty-five copies of the various titles to the right. Trimmed to fit the coziest stocking, these little books are specifically made for display beside the registers of the finest bookstores.

Featured in the gift catalogs of the Toronto Star, Globe & Mail, Chatelaine, and Toronto Life, we know Seth's series will make an even bigger splash come Christmas 2016.

Seth's comics and illustrations have appeared in the New York Times Magazine, McSweeney's Quarterly, and The New Yorker. He is Lemony Snicket's partner for the new Young Readers series, All the Wrong Questions, and the author of the Palookaville series of graphic novels.

Praise for Christmas Ghost Stories

"The two classic Christmas ghost stories that Seth and Biblioasis fashioned last year were a huge success for us. Nifty packaging, striking design—so Seth. The perfect impulse, stocking stuffer, take-to-a-party gift idea that you can tuck into a tiny space at the cash."

—BEN MCNALLY, BEN MCNALLY BOOKS, TORONTO, ON

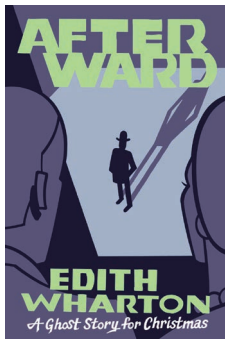

"Seth's Christmas Ghost Stories series resurrects the legacy of fireside tales at Christmas with these beautifully illustrated editions. They're an ideal holiday impulse gift that our customers loved and found hard to resist."

Afterward

EDITH WHARTON

A newly rich American couple buy an ancient manor house in England, where they hope to live out their days in solitude. One day, when the couple are gazing out at their grounds, they spy a mysterious stranger. When her husband disappears shortly after this eerie encounter, the wife learns the truth about the legend that haunts the ancient estate.

M.R. JAMES

While engrossed in an account of the death of a student obsessed with his own hair, a man leans down to absently pet his dog—oblivious of the true nature of the creature crouching beside him. This classic ghost story by M.R. James is a spooky holiday delight.

The Crown Derby Plate

MARJORIE BOWEN

An antique collector hears of an ancient woman with a large collection of china. Hoping to complete a particular set, the collector pays a visit to the woman's ramshackle house, where she makes a terrifying discovery. This 1933 story confirmed Marjorie Bowen as one of our best ghost story writers.

Halloween might seem like the spookiest time of year, but Charles Dickens felt otherwise. He was among the many authors who set their scariest stories during the dim and shivering days of—yes, Christmas.

First published in 1866 for a special Yuletide issue of All the Year Round, Dickens' "The Signalman" has since fallen into obscurity. An eerie story of isolation, dread, and supernatural visitation, this book is a small treasure, meant to be read aloud on a cold, dark winter night.

One Who Saw

A.M. BURRAGE

Originally published on Christmas in 1931 and widely regarded as A.M. Burrage's masterpiece, One Who Saw tells the story of a writer enchanted by a spectre of a weeping woman. His obsession builds until her ghostly hand falls from her face and he, in horror, becomes "one who sees."

The Museum at the End of the World

JOHN METCALF

“John Metcalf comes as close to the baffling, painful comedy of human experience as a writer can get.”—Alice Munro

COVER NOT FINAL

In this, his first book of fiction since Adult Entertainment, a New York Times Notable Book of 1990, legendary Canadian writer and editor John Metcalf is back—in full comic force—with a linked collection of stories and novellas. Set in Nashville, Memphis, New Orleans, and Ottawa, these tales span the life of writer Robert Forde and his wife Sheila. Playing with various forms of comedy throughout, Metcalf paints a portrait of 20th century literary life with levity, satire, and unsuspecting moments of emotional depth. Destined to be heralded as one of the most important books of the year, The Museum at the End of the World secures Metcalf’s position among Canada’s greatest literary figures.

John Metcalf is the author of more than a dozen works of fiction and non-fiction, including Standing Stones: Selected Stories, Going Down Slow, and Kicking Against the Pricks.

Praise for Adult Entertainment and John Metcalf

“In the past few decades, Canada has won a reputation as a prolific producer of high-quality short stories. Alice Munro, Mavis Gallant, and John Metcalf are among those who have proven themselves masters of the difficult form, which demands incisiveness and the appearance of effortless simplicity.”—MACLEAN’S

Kathy Page’s new collection of short fiction focuses on pairs: intense one-on-one relationships and encounters. Characters undergo genetic testing, garden, overeat, starve themselves, travel, fall pregnant, all while simultaneously driving each other towards moments where they—sometimes unwillingly—glimpse the meaning and shape of their lives, and who they might become. Following the success of her 2014 Giller Prize-longlisted collection Paradise & Elsewhere, The Two of Us offers stories that explore the emotional knots that bind us all.

Kathy Page is the author of seven novels, including Alphabet (an Indie Next Great Read of 2014 and Kirkus Best Book of 2014), Frankie Styne & the Silver Man, and The Story of My Face, as well as many short stories.

“Moody, shape-shifting, provocative and always as compelling as a strong light at the end of a road you hesitate to walk down... but will.” —AMY BLOOM

“Her fiction is sensuous and verdant, grafting lyrical prose onto stories and situations that appear almost as legends.” —NATIONAL POST

“Rebelling against a literary orthodoxy that holds up stalwart realism as the true writer’s best and only friend, [Page is] obviously comfortable with exotic tales that don’t fall into preordained categories and which unfold in ways equally unpredictable and strange... marvellous... immersive and mystery-laden.” —VANCOUVER SUN

The Life-Writer

DAVID CONSTANTINE

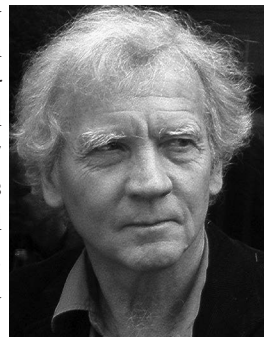

The North American debut novel from an author the New York Times Book Review crowned “a British master” of fiction.

COVER NOT FINAL

After the death of her beloved husband, Katrin, a literary biographer, copes with the loss by writing his personal history. While researching the letters and journals he left behind, however, she comes to the devastating conclusion that his life before their marriage was far richer than the one they shared. To understand and recreate the period of his greatest happiness—a period of intense friendship and love in the fall and winter of 1968, with a young French woman named Monique—Katrin embarks on a heartbreaking journey to discover the man she never fully knew.

David Constantine is an award-winning short story writer, poet, and translator. The title story of his North American debut collection of short fiction, In Another Country: Selected Stories (Biblioasis, 2015) was adapted into the Academy Award-nominated feature film 45 Years. He is the author of one previous novel, Davies, as well as four collections of short stories in the UK, and ten collections of poetry. He lives in Oxford, England, where until 2012 he edited Modern Poetry in Translation with his wife Helen.

Praise for The Life-Writer

“Constantine... proves himself yet again one of the greatest analysts of feeling working in fiction today, and one of the most lyrical. The first chapter is so shockingly accomplished that I had to stop, go back and immediately reread it.”
—THE GUARDIAN

“Here, [Constantine] has a persistent interest in the discarded pieces of other people’s lives that can reawaken one’s own past, or open up the incommunicable in the present.”—FINANCIAL TIMES

This selection of David Constantine's best short fiction, named among Kirkus Reviews' Best Story Collections of 2015, spans the author's remarkable 30-year career. Known for their pristine emotional clarity, their spare but intensely evocative dialogue, and their fearless exposures of the heart in moments of defiance, change, resistance, flight, isolation, and redemption, these stories demonstrate Constantine's timeless appeal. Now completely sold out of its hardcover run, this attractively priced paperback edition will appeal to every lover of great literature.

David Constantine is an award-winning writer, poet, and translator. His debut North American novel, The Life-Writer, will be published in the fall of 2016.

The two novellas and three short stories in this new collection by Governor General’s Award winner Leon Rooke are united by place and mood.

The title novella, set in a southern post-WWII American town—a kind of “comic Winesburg, Ohio,” as the author describes it—sports a Watermelon Queen, a ten-year-old businessman, and other colourful eccentrics, all of whom are puzzled by the familiar lead in a new sexy movie that’s come to town. The second novella takes place further south, in a small village perched in the highlands of Chiapas, Mexico. Told in the style of Jose Saramago or Garcia Marquez, daring young women, mad mothers, and traumatized children are affected radically by the magic of their world. With these joyful, touching, brilliantly crafted pieces, Rooke speaks to a time and sensibility long forgotten.

Leon Rooke is a novelist, short story writer, editor, and critic. He has published 28 books, nearly 300 short stories, and is the recipient of the North Carolina Award for Literature.

Praise for Leon Rooke

“[Rooke] is simply not like any other writer out there. He’s a national treasure... Often, out of the darkest and most moribund situations, he wrestles a startling and uncanny beauty, an affirmation of life, a stunning reversal that does not bespeak any faith or philosophy but a joy in the exuberant play of language.”

—THE GLOBE & MAIL

During the night of a storm, an Appalachian girl delivers a baby and disappears. The next morning, Raymond Toker finds the baby under a bush and takes to the mountain roads to find her a home. While Turner carries out his quest, the child’s father, Truman, with “teeth as rotten as his soul,” drives his battered car along the same paths.

Though critically acclaimed when first published by Knopf in 1990, and widely considered among Rooke’s best novels, A Good Baby has been unjustly forgotten. This beautiful new ReSet reissue brings attention to this fast, funny, frightening masterpiece.

Leon Rooke is a novelist, short story writer, editor, and critic. He has published 28 books, nearly 300 short stories, and is the recipient of the North Carolina Award for Literature.

Praise for Leon Rooke and A Good Baby

“Rooke is one of the great post-Faulkner southern prose stylists... who breaks the rules, makes up new rules, fractures and twists the story form with breathtaking aplomb, while communicating a generosity of spirit and ‘joie de vivre’ that is endlessly attractive.” —THE GLOBE & MAIL

“A master... every word in [A Good Baby] becomes something other-than-it-was.” —THE WASHINGTON POST

“Rooke has written a story in which everything is done, told and thought in an exuberant white heat... a backwoods Valhalla in which everyone is a god, demigod or devil, with larger-than-life passions and idiosyncrasies.”

Higher Ground

IAN MCGILLIS

“Deep, psychologically dead-on, minutely observed yet worldly—and very funny.” —Yann Martel

COVER NOT FINAL

Ian McGillis may well have grown up in the whitest place in North America: Edmonton, Alberta in the 1970s and '80s. Yet, through a series of fortuitous accidents, he became exposed to the world of black music—first soul and Motown, then reggae, then hip-hop—and it became a lifelong passion.

In three parts—built around Stevie Wonder’s Innervisions, The Congos’ Heart of The Congos, and Nas’ Illmatic—Higher Ground recounts his love affair with each form. McGillis does not shy away from the tough questions: What is the line between sincere appreciation and cultural appropriation? Can a white person truly understand soul, reggae, and hip-hop? Can a black form “cross over” without losing its essence? His answers to each of these questions, and many more, are thoughtful and illuminating, and may well leave the reader rethinking some of his own assumptions.

Reminiscent of the best writing of Greil Marcus and John Jeremiah Sullivan, and mixing memoir, cultural history, and musical and cultural theory in a fresh and readable way, Higher Ground offers up a real life The Commitments and a life-study in musical appreciation.

Ian McGillis resides in Montreal, is the author of the best-selling novel A Tourist’s Guide to Glengarry, and writes a weekly books column for the Montreal Gazette.

Octopus

PATRICK WARNER

The capacity to write good poems of persona is a rare enough gift but it takes an extraordinary talent to successfully undertake the poetry of personality. Such a talent is Patrick Warner's.

COVER NOT FINAL

Like its eponymous totem creature, the poems in Octopus are canny, slippery, and metamorphic. As apt to channel the confessionalism of Anne Sexton as the red-in-tooth-and-claw nature poetry of Ted Hughes, Warner's voice ranges freely from the colloquial to the baroque. Over the past fifteen years, by harbouring and honouring such fraught tensions, Warner has been building one of the most taut and original bodies of work in Canadian literature. In Octopus we have him at his best.

Patrick Warner has published three collections of poetry: All Manner of Misunderstanding; There, There; and Mole. He has twice won the E.J. Pratt Poetry Prize. Warner grew up in Claremorris, County Mayo, Ireland. He immigrated to Canada in 1980 and since then has mostly lived in St. John's, Newfoundland.

Short Takes on the Apocalypse

PATRICIA YOUNG

"Patricia Young's poetry, jam-packed with linguistic wit and emotional urgency, vibrates with a compulsive, potentially explosive energy." —Anita Lahey

In her new collection, two-time Governor General's Award nominee Patricia Young decodes the fragile narratives that hold together our collective sense of self. Her poems leave no aspect of human nature untouched: passions, shames, and even our most blasé conditions are transformed through bold and unconventional metaphors. Young will comfort you and scare you with the same question, revelation, turn of phrase, yet she accomplishes all this amid an unquenchable joy, an abandon only barely contained.

Patricia Young is the author of eight books of poetry, and one book of short fiction, Airstream (Biblioasis, 2006). A two-time Governor General's Award nominee, she has also won the Pat Lowther Memorial Award, the Dorothy Livesay Poetry Prize, and the British Columbia Book Prize for Poetry. She lives in Victoria, British Columbia.

The Best of Windsor Cookbook

JONATHAN PINTO

Acclaimed CBC Windsor food columnist features the best dishes from his favourite local restaurants in this full-colour cookbook.

COVER NOT FINAL

Jonathan Pinto, Windsor-Essex's most celebrated food columnist, went on a mission to find the best dishes from the premiere restaurants in the region. After years of research, he showcases his delicious results in The Best of Windsor Cookbook, a stunning, 200-page, full-colour collection of signature recipes.

The book emphasizes Windsor's cultural and culinary diversity, styles that range from pub food to fine dining, and cuisines that span a variety of ethnicities. From Blak's Bakery's Country rye to the original Windsor-style pizza recipe from Volcano Pizzeria, Pinto's cookbook brings the best from "Canada's garden" to your table.

Jonathan Pinto is a columnist, food critic, and producer for CBC Radio One in Windsor, Ontario.
